

It is sad to see this country being taken over by corporate America. At the same time we have our military fighting wars to conquer various "regimes" and to spread freedom, we are losing our freedoms one by one in our own country. By allowing a few corporations to own radio, television and newspapers, the American people will be spoon fed whatever big business and our own political "regimes" wish us to know. We most certainly will not get the truth. Why is it that the people who are in control of our government (this would be the Bush/Cheney "regime") are so afraid of the American people knowing the truth. In my opinion, allowing their corporate buddies to own all of the media would ensure that America as a people remains ignorant. It also would ensure that those who do not share their political beliefs would never be heard. Where in the constitution does it say that to speak out or to protest makes a person unpatriotic? I realize that Colin Powell's son is now in charge of the FCC, and that my opinion is probably falling on deaf ears, but we should all be ashamed of ourselves if this change takes place. In addition, we can all kiss democracy goodbye!!
